

Foreword

The American Petroleum Institute estimates that nationwide millions of gallons of used oil are improperly disposed of each year. There's great news in South Carolina. The state has developed one of the nation's best and most comprehensive recycling programs targeting do-it-yourselfers (DIYers), that is, those who change their own oil. Consider this: DIYers in South Carolina recycled more than 1 million gallons of used oil in 2002 and more than 9 million gallons since 1990.

South Carolina's used oil recycling program is successful for a variety of reasons. Grant funding provided by the S.C. Department of Health and Environmental Control's (DHEC) Office of Solid Waste Reduction and Recycling (Office) helps to set up and maintain a statewide infrastructure for DIYers. Educational efforts include the "Recycle Guys" public service announcements starring "Motor Oil Guy" and the "Green Driver Project" targeting high school driver education classes. These efforts let South Carolinians know the environmental consequences of the improper disposal of used oil. And Santee Cooper, the state owned electric utility, picks up the used oil at most, if not all, recycling centers throughout the state and uses it to reduce the amount of coal needed to make electricity.

In addition, local governments across the state have played a major role in the success of South Carolina's used oil recycling program. Since the early 1990s, local governments have looked for ways to offer more comprehensive programs. They have added numerous used oil collection sites in their counties – making recycling more convenient for residents. In most cases, they also have added used oil filters and oil bottles to their recycling programs. In recent years, many counties have added specially designed tanks for the collection of oil/gasoline mixtures and agricultural oil as well.

Local governments also are instrumental in educating the public on the importance of recycling used motor oil and related products. Recycling coordinators prepare newspaper advertisements, present to civic groups, visit schools and participate in community festivals as part of their efforts to educate the public.

And, let's not forget the significant number of automobile parts stores and oil change/quick lube shops that accept used motor oil from DIYers for recycling. These additional outlets substantially enhance the state's used motor oil collection infrastructure.

Working together, we have made a difference!

Why should I recycle?

Recycling used motor oil is one way that you can demonstrate your commitment to protecting the environment while conserving energy resources.

The Office of Solid Waste Reduction and Recycling serves as the central point of contact in the many and varied efforts to promote used motor oil recycling in South Carolina. Examples of the Office's educational and technical assistance services include:

- developing and releasing nationally recognized, award-winning television public service announcements featuring an animated "Motor Oil Guy", as part of the "Recycle Guys" campaign, to television stations around the state to promote the importance of used oil recycling;
- distributing static service stickers to do-it-yourself oil changers (DIYers) around the state, reminding them to call DHEC's recycling hot line for the location of the nearest used oil recycling center;
- distributing oil bottle drain racks to counties and municipalities to collect the last bit of motor oil from the bottles so that they can be mixed with other plastic bottles for recycling;
- continuing efforts to establish oil recycling sites for small farmers in partnership with local governments;
- continuing to promote the "Green Driver Project" that targets students in high school driver education classes – presentations have been made to more than 9,500 students in 227 classrooms – with information on the recycling of used oil, filters and bottles, gasoline conservation and other environmental tips;
- awarding grants to local governments and schools to set up recycling and education programs with an emphasis on used oil, filters and bottles;
- continuing efforts to establish oil/gasoline mixture collection sites at recycling centers throughout the state; and
- making numerous presentations to schools, civic groups and local governments.

These public awareness efforts are working. The used oil collection and recycling efforts in South Carolina represent one of the top used oil collection programs in the nation. The amount of used oil collected in the state from DIYers has increased every year since 1991. In addition, South Carolina is among the first to offer "full service" recycling centers, collecting used oil filters and bottles alongside used oil.

What are the benefits of recycling used oil?

Recycling keeps used motor oil from contaminating rivers, streams and lakes. It also saves energy and helps conserve the limited supply of crude oil.

Purpose

In accordance with Section 44-96-160 of the S.C. Solid Waste Policy and Management Act of 1991 (Act), the purpose of this report is to:

1. provide the number of used oil recycling sites available to the public in each county;
2. provide the number and location of used oil recycling sites in each county receiving grant funding from DHEC's Office of Solid Waste Reduction and Recycling; and
3. provide the amount of used oil collected from the public.

Recycling Used Oil is Mandatory in South Carolina

As a result of the Act, it is illegal to dispose of used oil in county and municipal landfills. In addition, according to the Pollution Control Act, it is illegal to dump used oil on the ground or in waterways. Violation of either of these laws can result in fines up to $200 and $10,000, respectively. To help DIYers properly recycle used motor oil, the state has implemented a used oil grant program through DHEC that helps local governments establish collection programs for their residents.

Used Oil Regulation

A national used oil regulation became effective on July 28, 1995. The regulation was drafted from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's rule found in 40 CFR 279. The South Carolina version of the regulation varies slightly from the federal rule. Statutory authority for the regulation is found in Section 44-96-160 of the S.C. Code of Laws, 1976.

The S.C. Used Oil Regulation (61-107.279) replaces the used oil reference in R.61-79.266 and 267, with the exception of the mixture rule regarding characteristic hazardous waste.

Any handler of used oil engaged in multiple activities (i.e., generating, transporting and marketing) must comply with all applicable provisions of the regulations. South Carolina requires all owners and operators of used oil processing, refining, off-specification burning and marketing facilities to obtain a permit from DHEC. Used oil recycling centers, aggregation points, transporters and transfer facilities must register with DHEC. All facilities are required to follow certain reporting and record keeping requirements.

Number of Used Oil Recycling Sites

By the end of the 2002 calendar year, South Carolina had more than 700 used oil collection sites available for DIYers. More than half the sites were established through DHEC's grant program. In addition to local government sites, Advance Auto Parts and AutoZone stores, as well as, other oil change locations, accept used oil from DIYers. All sites accepting used oil from the public must be registered with DHEC to be in compliance with the Used Oil Regulation. Once these sites are registered, they are listed by county in South Carolina Recycles: A Directory of Recycling Programs. This publication can be requested by calling (800) 768-7348. A listing of the oil recycling sites throughout the state is also provided on pages 17 – 37 of this report.

Gallons Collected

In 2002, DIYers recycled 1,160,865 gallons of used oil at the more than 700 locations throughout South Carolina. This marks the 12th consecutive year a record amount was collected. Since the beginning of used oil collection in 1990, DIYers in South Carolina have recycled more than 9 million gallons of used oil. The 10 counties that collected the most oil in 2002 were Aiken, Anderson, Berkeley, Dorchester, Greenville, Horry, Lexington, Richland, Spartanburg and York. Please see the graph on page 5 for an illustration of the growth of the state's oil collection program.

What products are made from recycled motor oil?

Used motor oil can be reprocessed into fuel used in furnaces for heat or in power plants to generate electricity for homes, schools and businesses. It also can be used in industrial and utility boilers, mixed with asphalt and blended with marine fuels. Used motor oil also can be re-refined into lubricating oils that meet the same American Petroleum Institute/Society of Automotive Engineers (API/SAE) specifications as virgin motor oil.

Used Oil Filters

Used oil filters are banned from landfill disposal in South Carolina unless they have been hot-drained or compacted to their smallest practical volume. Hot-draining is defined as draining the oil filter at or near engine operating temperature. The fact that each filter may contain from four ounces to one quart of used oil makes them an excellent target for recycling programs seeking to expand their list of accepted recyclables.

The used oil filter recycling program began in 1994 and has seen exceptional growth over the past eight years. The program began with three counties collecting filters; the number has increased to more than 40 counties in 2002. With the increase in the number of counties collecting used oil filters for recycling, so has the amount of filters, from 45,082 filters in 1994 to 320,000 filters (210 tons) in 2002. While this represents a 35 ton decrease from 2001, it does not mean that used oil filter recycling has decreased. There are two likely reasons for this decrease. First, several counties now collect and market used oil filters with their white goods and/or other metals. With this being the case, not all used oil filters that are being recycled are being counted directly. Some may be included in the numbers for white goods and/or metals. Secondly, Lexington County experienced operational problems with their oil filter processing equipment throughout 2002. As a result, Lexington County reported that they did not recycle any used oil filters in 2002 despite recycling more than 45 tons in 2001. The five counties that collected the most oil filters in 2002 were Barnwell, Berkeley, Greenville, Spartanburg and York.

Used Oil Bottles

Because oil bottles can contain up to an ounce of oil in each container and are made from recyclable #2 plastic (HDPE), the state established a program to capture the bottles before they went into a landfill. South Carolina is one of the first states in the nation to target oil bottle recycling.

The program began in 1995 when Lexington and Charleston counties participated in an oil bottle recycling project. Based on the response and results of the collection program, other counties have expanded their programs to include the oil bottles. Seven years later, the pilot project has grown into a successful ongoing program with nearly 40 counties collecting bottles.

DIYers must be educated about the importance of completely draining oil bottles to make them suitable for recycling. Again, at the end of an oil change, the bottles typically contain about an ounce of oil. If oil bottles are not thoroughly drained, they can contaminate other plastic bottles collected for recycling. One emphasis of the program is to continue to provide counties and municipalities oil bottle drain racks for draining up to 50 oil bottles at one time as well as distributing home drain racks to DIYers. Most counties are now using oil bottle drain racks to drain the oil that is left in the bottle. Once drained, the clean oil bottles can be mixed with other pigmented HDPE plastics for recycling.

Collected motor oil bottles are recycled into non-food items such as flower pots, pallets and other items. South Carolina continues to be a leader in its expansion of the used oil recycling program with the establishment of an oil bottle collection system, a plastic traditionally left out of the system due to the potential contamination of oil.

Used Oil Filter Facts

Used oil filters are recyclable because they are made of steel, North America's No. 1 recycled material. They are recycled into new steel products – cans, cars, appliances and construction materials.

In 2002, the counties collected more than 92 tons of used oil bottles, an 8 ton decrease from last year. One possible reason for this decrease is that more counties are collecting and marketing used oil bottles with other pigmented HDPE plastic. As a result, a portion of the used oil bottles that are being recycled are being counted in the HDPE plastic rather than the used oil bottle numbers. From 2001 to 2002, the amount of HDPE plastic being recycled increased by over 1,223 tons. The top five counties that collected motor oil bottles in 2002 were Lexington, Pickens, Spartanburg, Sumter and York.

Farmer Oil

According to S.C. Solid Waste Management Regulation 61-107.279, farmers are considered small quantity generators of used oil and, as a result, must follow certain management practices.

- Farmers who generate more than 25 gallons of used oil in a month are required to store the used oil in a container with no leaks or visible rusting.
- The container must be labeled "Used Oil." Used oil generated from farm machinery is not considered DIY used oil and may not be disposed of in DIY collection tanks.
- Farmers who transport more than 55 gallons of used oil at any time are required to register with DHEC.

Farmers who generate an average of 25 gallons of used oil per month or less from vehicles or machinery used on the farm in a calendar year are not subject to the requirements of this regulation but should follow best management standards and practices in handling used oil.

To assist these farmers with the proper management of used oil generated on the farm, DHEC continues to encourage local governments to establish oil recycling sites for farmers. Agricultural oil tanks typically hold 600 gallons of used oil and are fitted with a pump and hose in an effort to make it easier for farmers to deliver up to 55 gallons of used oil at one time. The agricultural oil tanks are serviced by Santee Cooper.

Since the farmer oil program began in 1998, 14 farmer oil sites have been established in 11 counties. The sites are in the following counties: Fairfield, Georgetown, Greenville, Greenwood, Hampton, Lee, Newberry, Oconee, Pickens, Sumter and Williamsburg. Nine more counties received grant funding to set up farmer oil tanks in fiscal year 2003.

Did you know?

According to the S.C. Department of Motor Vehicles, 2,330,484 automobiles were registered in the state in fiscal year 2002.

Oil/Gasoline Mixture

South Carolina continues to expand the used oil recycling program by adding oil/gasoline mixture collection sites to the county programs. The oil/gasoline mixture tanks are typically 500 gallons and are designed to accept oil, gasoline and oil/gasoline mixtures from lawn equipment and recreational vehicles (e.g.: boats and motorcycles). The oil/gasoline mixture tanks are serviced by Santee Cooper.

The requirements for establishing an oil/gasoline mixture collection site are more stringent than for typical used oil collection sites. In particular, oil/gasoline mixture collection tanks sites must:

- meet the requirements of the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA 30) Codes and Standards and
- be approved by the Office of the State Fire Marshall.

Eighteen oil/gasoline mixture collection sites have been established in 16 counties throughout the state. In a couple of cases, the counties are continuing to work with the Office of the State Fire Marshall to receive final approval. The sites are located in the following counties: Anderson, Berkeley, Charleston, Cherokee, Dorchester, Fairfield, Georgetown, Greenville, Hampton, Kershaw, Lexington, Newberry, Oconee, Sumter, Williamsburg and York. No grant funding was awarded to set up oil/gasoline mixture tanks in fiscal year 2003.

Grant Funding

Through fiscal year 2002, the Office has provided a nine-year total of $8,576,328.97 to local governments for the establishment of:

- used oil collection and recycling sites;
- curbside used oil collection and recycling programs;
- used oil filter collection and recycling programs;
- motor oil bottle collection and recycling programs;
- oil/gasoline mixture collection and recycling programs;
- farmer oil collection and recycling programs;
- oil bottle draining programs (drain racks); and
- the establishment of public education programs.

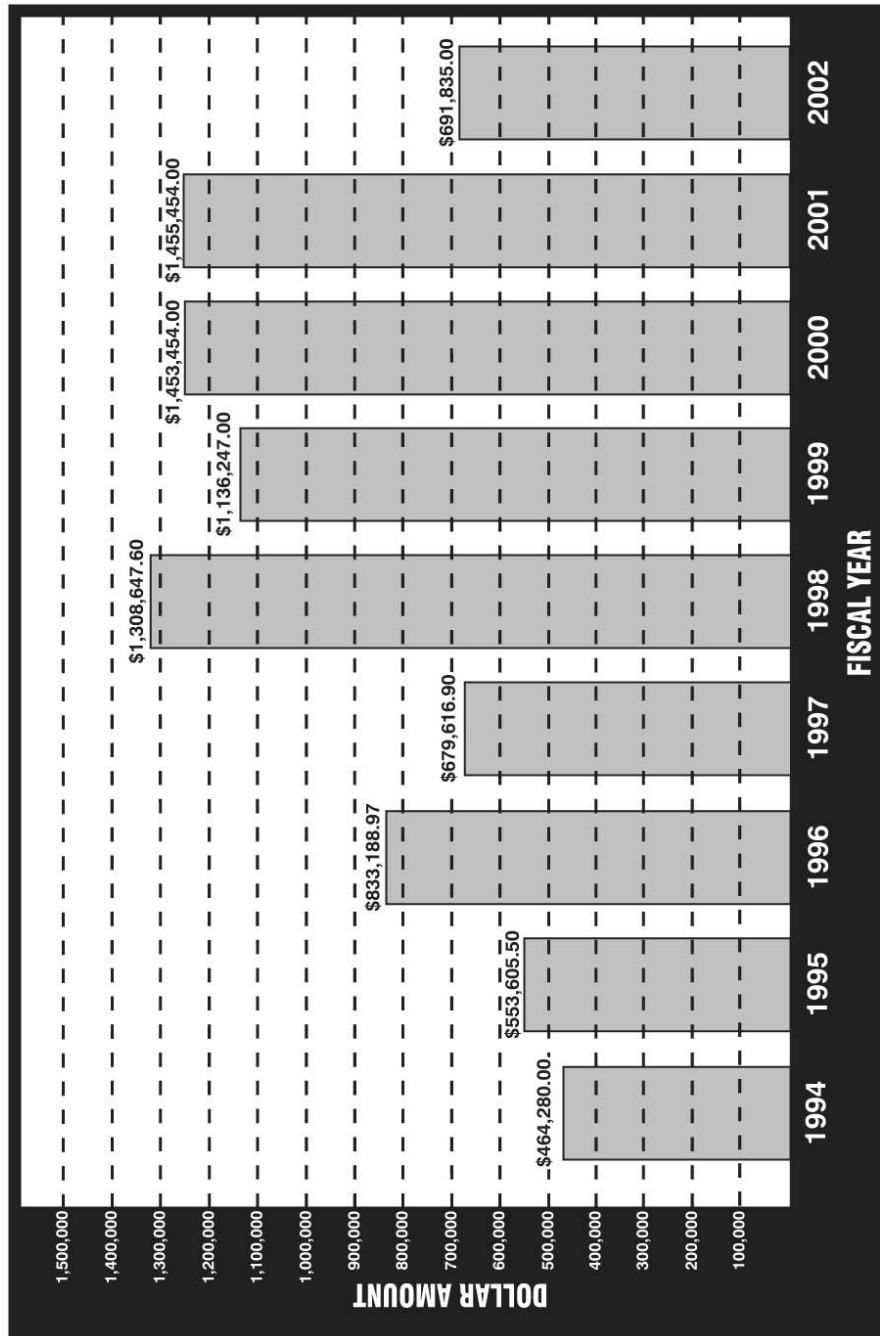

The Office also provided counties and local governments with technical assistance and public education materials to promote used motor oil, used oil filter and oil bottle recycling in South Carolina.

Please see the chart on page 11 for a year-by-year breakdown of grant assistance provided to local governments. A brief summary of the individual grants awarded in fiscal year 2002 is available on pages 12 through 15.

Conclusion

While the Office is proud of the success of South Carolina's oil recycling efforts and fully expects collection of used oil, filters and bottles to continue to increase, improper disposal of this valuable resource still presents a serious threat to our state's public health, environment and economic stability. South Carolina must continue to promote the proper handling of used motor oil and its related products to ensure the quality of life South Carolinians have come to expect.
